EXCITING RUNAWAY.

A farmer named Perry, of Dundaff, accompanied by three ladies in a twoseated market wagon, was driving up Main street in front of Tingley's drug store at half-past eight Saturday evening when his team became frightened at a street car which ran up beside Both horses reared and one turned and came down across the other's back. An exciting mix-up followed and the animals turned, broke away from the vehicle and ran down the street. In front of Coogan's clothing store they struck the turnout of Thomas Morgan, demolished a wheel and scared that horse so that it jumped on the sidewalk and would have plunged into a plate glass window had t not been stopped the instant it was. The runaways were caught on South Main street without doing any further damage. No one was injured, ladies jumped to the sidewalk when the horses went up in the air. How the animals got free from the wagon without damaging it is a mystery.

AN HISTORIC SPOT IN BRADFORD COUNTY

FIRST CHURCH LOCATED NEAR WYALUSING.

In 1760 the Early Missionaries Established a Mission Church for Indians and Performed the First Baptism-Spot Marked By an Appropriate Monument.

From the Towanda Review.

On June 26, 1763, near where Wyalusing now stands, occurred the first Christian baptism to be performed in what is now Bradford county. person baptized was Papunhank, a Monsey chief of some note.

A short distance below the village of

tracks, stands a monument erected to perpetuate the memory of the men who first brought religious teachings into this region and their converts. Count Zinzendorf, founder of the Moravian church, came to America in 1741 from Europe and established the Moravian settlement at Bethlehem. He is supposed to have been the first white man to set foot in the Wyoming valley. In 1742 he came with an interpreter and proposed to talk with the Indians. They looked upon him with great distrust and it was proposed to assassinate him. A few warriors selected for the purpose approached the tent of the unsuspecting stranger by night to accomplish their designs. Peeping through an opening of his tent they saw a huge rattlesnake crawling over his feet without doing him any apparent harm, while he was engaged in writing. Considering that he was protected by the great spirit they de-

Moravian missionaries among the

In 1745 two "Moravian missionaries named Spangenburg and Zeisberger made a visit to the Indians along the Susquehanna river. They found near Wyalusing the remains of an old Indian village called Co-hon-to-to. They learned that the village had at one time been inhabited by a tribe of Indians called Te-ho-tach-se, upon whom the Five Nations of Indians made war and wholly exterminated them, the greater part being stain, a few only being taken captive and adopted by some of the families of the Cayuga tribe of Indians. This battlwas fought with bows and arrows and is supposed to have occurred not later than 1650, as in 1641 the Dutch at Fort Orange, on the Northern Frontier, had supplied the Mohawks, one of the tribes of the Five Nations with guns.

Zeisberger returned to Philadelphia in 1750 and induced Bishop Cammerhoff to accompany him on a returning expedition. They were deeply interested in their church work among the Indians.

In 1752 Papunbank, a Monsey Chief of some note, with a number of families, came to Wyalusing from the head waters of Cayuga lake and built a new town a little below the site of Gohon-to-to and called it McChiwihilusing (or Wyalusing).

FRIEDENHUTTEN.

In May, 1760. Christian Frederick Post, a Polish-Prussian and missionary of the Moravian church arrived at Mc-Chiwihilusing and established a church among the Indians. In 1766 the village was re-named and called Friedenhutten, huts of peace. From 1766 to 1771, 206 Indians had connected themselves with the mission. The lands on which the village of Priedenhutten was located was sold by the 'Troquois" to the Christian Indians in 1766, and in 1768 sold the same tract to the Proprietaries of Pennsylvanio. The latter sale was for a time kept profoundly secret from the Indians at Wyalusing, who had no intimation of the fact until Dec. 5. when it was told them by a trader. Governor Penn had promised that his surveyors should not run lines nearer than five miles to the village, yet in the spring of the next year proprietary warrants were laid in sight of the village. Afterwards the whites began to push their settlements up the Susquehanna, and the mission became more exposed to the irregularities, immoralities and illicit trade in ordent spirits, which could not be checked, and it was decided to abandon the village and remove with the Christian Indians to the Allegheny river, which was done in 1772.

COMMEMORATED. To mark the spot of Friedenhutten and perpetuate the memory of the Christian Indian town a monument, bearing fitting inscriptions, was erected under the auspices of the Moravian Historical Society In 1871, which stands in an open field about one mile east of Wyalusing, at what is known as Sugar Run siding on the Lehigh Valley rail-

On the northern face of this monument is inscribed, "To mark the afte of Friedenhutten, McChiwilusing, a settiement of the Moravian Indians, between 1765 and 1772." On the Eastern face. "This stone was creeted on the 15th day of June. in the year of Redemption, 1871, by members of the Moravian Historical
